

Counterfoil runs the places that sell time.

Tickets, sessions, courts and tours — sold at the counter, checked at the gate and reconciled by close.

14 ways to book

Never sold twice

বাংলা & English

THE PROBLEM

Venues sell time with tools built for shelves.

A retail till knows a product. It doesn't know 18:00.

A court sold twice for the same hour
Two teams arrive. One goes home.

A tour sold with no guide free
The booking stands; the tour does not.

A ticket nobody at the gate can check
A paper stub passes from hand to hand.

"Is 18:00 still free?"

Asked at every counter, every day —
and answered by a spreadsheet, a
WhatsApp group and a guess.

AT THE COUNTER

Paper stubs, a generic till,
and a cash box that never quite adds up.

What gets better on day one.

The jobs a venue already does — done in one system, instead of a spreadsheet, a chat group, a till and a marketplace.

AVAILABILITY · TODAY

"Is 18:00 free?" — asked in a chat group.

- ✓ Every counter reads the same live count.

SELLING TIME · TODAY

A retail till that knows products, not sessions.

- ✓ Sessions, courts, seats and tours — 14 ways to book.

PAYMENT · TODAY

A bKash screenshot, checked by eye.

- ✓ bKash confirmed by transaction ID before the sale lands.

THE GATE · TODAY

A paper stub passed from hand to hand.

- ✓ One scan admits. A used ticket is refused.

EVENTS · TODAY

A marketplace takes a cut of every ticket.

- ✓ Your own event page, and no cut of the ticket.

CASH-UP · TODAY

A cash box that never quite adds up.

- ✓ Counted against expected, with the variance on record.

THE PRODUCT

One system, from the office to the gate.

OS runs the business on the web. Go sells and admits on a tablet or a phone.

✓ Same catalogue

What OS sets up is what Go sells.

✓ Same capacity

A place sold at one counter is gone at every other.

✓ Same ledger

Every sale lands in the reports as it happens.

Sells and admits

From first sale to cash-up.

Four steps every venue already takes — done in one place, by the people already doing them.

The day, at a glance.

What came in, what is filling up, and what needs a decision before it costs money.

1 Four numbers

Revenue, capacity sold, arrivals and what is booked ahead.

2 Revenue trend

The last 30 days against the 30 before them.

3 Needs attention

A short cash count, a booking about to stop, a tablet gone quiet.

BOOKING TYPES

Fourteen ways to sell time.

One engine behind all of them, so a court and a concert can't sell the same hour twice.

Find it in a tap.

The sell wall shows what is on sale — and how much of it is left.

1 Search or pick a category

Admission, guided tours, events.

2 Read the tile

Its price, and what is left right now.

3 The cart stays beside it

Every line, the payment method and Charge.

One sheet asks only what the booking needs.

1 A show

The day, then a session with its seats left.

2 A cinema

Seats on the map; each section prices itself.

3 A lane

How long, which lane and when — or Start now.

Take the money, however it comes.

1 Check the cart

Change a quantity, add a discount, park it for later.

2 Cash

Tap Exact or a note; the change is worked out.

3 bKash or Bangla QR

Confirmed with the transaction ID before the sale lands.

Card

The ticket, the moment the money lands.

One sale issues a code the gate can scan — and three ways to put it in the guest's hand.

Print

The receipt and every ticket on one strip, with a QR per guest.

Send

SMS, email or both — the cashier sees the exact message first.

Show

Tap a ticket for a code big enough for the guest to photograph.

PRINTED IN ONE STRIP

Checked in at the gate.

Scan a ticket and the phone says who to let in — a family ticket lets the whole family in.

1 Scan

A used ticket is refused, and says why.

2 Check in by session

Each session keeps its own count: 3/3 in.

3 Settle first

A balance still owed is taken before anyone goes in.

Built for the hand that's in a hurry.

A cashier taps about twice as fast as anyone else, from an arm's length away, in front of a queue. Every rule in the till follows from that.

Two taps to a sale

Tap the tile, tap Add. Nothing stands between a cashier and the money.

✓ TWO TAPS, NO DIALOGS

48px, never smaller

Every control a thumb has to hit is at least 48px, on a phone and on the counter tablet.

✓ 44PX IS THE FLOOR APP-WIDE

Read at arm's length

The price is the biggest thing on a tile, and nothing in a sheet goes under 13px.

✓ ABOUT 80CM FROM THE EYE

Never colour alone

A refusal is a shape, a texture and a sentence — legible across a gate in daylight.
